Pre-christian Ireland | Art History Leaving Cert

Even in saga literature like the Táin Bó Cúailnge (“Cattle-raid of Cooley”) we should be wary of seeing any continuity from pre-Christian mythology or religious beliefs, since classically-educated and biblically-literate men of religion composed this literature, imagining what Ireland may have been like before Christianity, and those expectations were shaped by Christian ideology. In medieval Ireland, ideas that are often today considered as “pagan” in origin, such as charms for ...
